“First, I’ll be talking to Gerry Comninos, CEO of Hydra Light, which is revolutionising the portable power industry with its HydraCell fuel cell technology, a fuel cell that generates its own power when activated by dipping it in water. Hydra Light’s products are aimed at reducing the waste associated with single use batteries and raising awareness of an alternative energy solution. The Company has developed technology that can harness the electrons liberated from a magnesium anode, when immersed in water, into a useable direct current power. The Hydra Light system is a revolutionary technology that creates power using a chemical reaction between metal and water. The HydraCell uses this reaction to efficiently capture electrons released during this process with the water acting as a catalyst to create this reaction once it comes into contact with the HydraCell.”
